Attendance & Punctuality Policy

A fair, clear and people-first approach to showing up for one another.

A message from Appzeto

At Appzeto, we consider our employees family. That is why we do not want routine late arrivals to lead to salary cuts or automatic half-days. We believe in understanding, trust and support—but being a family also means respecting one another. We need discipline, punctuality and responsibility from everyone so our teams can work well and serve our clients. Let's support each other and follow the rules together.

1. Purpose

This policy explains Appzeto's expectations for attendance, punctuality, breaks and communication with HR. It supports reliable teamwork and client commitments while ensuring employees are treated fairly and respectfully.

2. Scope & applicability

This policy applies to all Appzeto employees, across every department, designation, seniority level and office location—including Sales, Development, Team Leaders, Managers, HR, Sales Heads and Senior Management.

3. Our attendance approach

Appzeto aims to build discipline through responsibility and consistency, not fear. Routine late arrival is not subject to automatic salary deduction or half-day marking under this policy. Employees must still follow their assigned work schedule, record attendance correctly and communicate attendance concerns to HR.

Working Hours & Attendance

Employees are expected to report to their assigned office and record attendance using the office biometric machine.

OFFICE	OFFICIAL WORKING HOURS	SCHEDULED BREAKS	GRACE PERIOD ENDS
New Palasia	11:00 AM – 7:00 PM	45-minute lunch break	11:15 AM
Corporate House	10:00 AM – 6:30 PM	Lunch: 1:30–2:00 PM Evening: 4:45–5:00 PM	10:15 AM

4. Grace period & late arrival

Appzeto provides a 15-minute grace period after the official starting time. Employees should arrive and mark attendance within this period. The grace period is a flexibility—not an extension of official working hours.

- Within grace period: Arrival up to 11:15 AM at New Palasia or 10:15 AM at Corporate House.
- Beyond grace period: The arrival is recorded as a late-arrival occurrence for attendance review.
- Monthly allowance: Up to two late arrivals in a calendar month may occur without the usual late-arrival issue becoming a disciplinary concern, subject to the grace-period rules. From the third occurrence onward, employees must follow the applicable HR attendance and leave procedure.

Management confirmation required: The exact treatment of the third and subsequent late arrivals has not been defined. No automatic leave deduction, half-day or salary deduction is created by this policy.

5. Salary deduction & half-day approach

Routine late arrivals do not result in automatic salary deductions or half-day marking as a standard punishment. Repeated concerns may be addressed through HR communication, counselling, documentation and fair corrective action. Any other attendance-linked adjustment must be reviewed by HR against applicable law and company terms before it is applied.

6. Leave & informing HR

For planned leave, inform HR in advance and follow the company's leave approval process. Prior notice helps teams plan work and client commitments. In an emergency, inform HR as soon as reasonably possible. If HR is unavailable, contact your reporting manager or another HR representative, then update HR when possible.

- Do not remain absent without informing HR.
- Unplanned absence and related communication will be documented and reviewed fairly.
- Leave entitlement, approval hierarchy and leave-balance adjustments follow the company's separately approved leave rules; this policy does not create new leave entitlements.

Everyday Workplace Expectations

7. Break-time discipline

Use the scheduled breaks for your assigned office and return to your work area on time. Breaks should not unnecessarily affect client communication, team productivity or colleagues. An occasional short delay should be handled reasonably; repeated or deliberate misuse may be discussed with HR.

8. Personal errands & supporting colleagues

Employees should manage personal errands, appointments and individual work independently whenever possible. Please do not leave your own responsibilities or work area unnecessarily to accompany a colleague. Genuine emergencies, approved assistance and reasonable support for one another should always be handled with understanding.

9. Professional workplace behaviour

Appzeto values a friendly and cooperative workplace. During working hours, focus on assigned responsibilities, respect colleagues' time and avoid unnecessary interruptions. Normal, brief and respectful conversations are welcome when they do not disrupt work, client commitments or team productivity.

10. Work-from-home

Appzeto follows an office-based working model. Work from home is not a standard arrangement or an employee entitlement under the current policy. Employees are expected to work from their assigned office during official hours. Any possible exception must be confirmed and documented by management before it is treated as permitted.

11. Biometric attendance & record accuracy

Biometric attendance is Appzeto's official method for calculating attendance. Employees must record attendance honestly and accurately. Proxy attendance or any attempt to manipulate attendance records is not permitted.

- Mark attendance at the start of the day and when leaving, as required by the office's confirmed punch procedure.
- If you miss a punch, notice an incorrect entry or face a machine/technical issue, inform HR promptly and explain what happened.
- HR will review reported discrepancies and maintain attendance records. A missed punch should not be assumed to correct itself.
- The exact punch-in/punch-out requirements and correction deadline/approval process must be confirmed by HR and communicated to employees.

12. Early departure, office exit & official work

Before leaving early or leaving the office during working hours for personal reasons, inform and obtain the required approval from your reporting manager/HR. For official client visits, fieldwork or company work outside the office, notify your reporting manager/HR and follow the team's reporting process so attendance and work commitments can be recorded correctly. The exact approval and recording process is subject to management confirmation.

Fair Administration & Acknowledgement

13. HR responsibilities

HR maintains biometric attendance records, reviews reported discrepancies, handles leave-related communication, documents attendance concerns and applies this policy consistently. HR should communicate respectfully, consider genuine difficulties and give employees a reasonable opportunity to explain before a corrective decision is made.

14. Repeated attendance concerns

Where attendance concerns continue, HR may use a fair, documented approach. The steps below are a suggested framework for management approval—not an automatic or currently approved disciplinary sequence:

- Friendly reminder or verbal discussion.
- Formal counselling or written communication, where appropriate.
- Clear, documented expectations for improvement.
- Further action, if necessary, after review and an opportunity for the employee to explain.

15. Equal application & policy updates

The same attendance principles apply to all designations and departments. Any approved exception must be reasonable, documented and communicated transparently. Management may review or update this policy as business needs or applicable requirements change. HR will communicate approved changes to employees.

16. Employee acknowledgement

I confirm that I have received and read Appzeto's Attendance & Punctuality Policy. I understand my responsibility to follow the attendance, punctuality, biometric and HR communication requirements. I may contact HR if I need clarification.

A MESSAGE FROM APPZETO

At Appzeto, our employees are family. We believe in trust, support and treating people with respect. We do not want a fear-based workplace, and we do expect responsibility and discipline. Every employee helps build our client relationships, reputation and business. Protecting that trust is a shared responsibility.

1. Purpose, scope & responsibility

This policy sets the minimum standards for safe, honest and professional work at Appzeto. It applies to Sales, Developers, Team Leads, Project Managers, HR, Operations, Management and every other employee, regardless of designation or seniority.

- Follow this policy together with your employment agreement and lawful company procedures. If a rule is unclear, ask HR/Management before acting.
- Use company information, client relationships and work assets only for authorised Appzeto work. Access is a responsibility—not personal ownership.
- The same standards apply to everyone, including Team Leads and Management. No one may direct an employee to bypass this policy.

2. Confidential information

Confidential information means non-public information relating to Appzeto, its clients, employees or business, including:

- Client identities and contact details, requirements, proposals, quotations, contracts, payment details and project status.
- Company leads, prospect lists, assigned opportunities, follow-up notes, call history and sales records—whether kept in an approved sheet, email, company system or other authorised channel.
- Source code, repositories, databases, designs, credentials, API keys, server details, technical documents and test/production data.
- Internal pricing, business plans, employee records, financial/operational reports and processes.

3. Information security & personal-laptop use

Appzeto understands that employees may use their own laptops for work. Whether a device is personal or company-owned, company and client information must remain protected.

- Use your laptop only for authorised work and keep it password/PIN protected. Lock it whenever unattended and do not let family, friends or other people use your work account or access company/client files.
- Keep your operating system and security updates reasonably current. Do not disable security protections or install unapproved software for company work.
- Store work files only in company-approved locations and accounts. Do not keep company/client data in personal email, personal cloud storage, personal repositories, USB drives or messaging apps unless specifically approved in writing.
- Do not share passwords, MFA codes, API keys or access tokens. Never hard-code secrets into source code or send credentials through chats.
- Do not upload company/client information to AI tools or other external services unless the specific tool and use are approved by Appzeto.
- Do not copy, sell, publish, alter, delete or disclose company/client information for personal or unauthorised purposes.
- Immediately report a lost device, suspected malware, phishing, exposed credentials, wrong-recipient message or possible data leak to your manager and the designated IT/HR contact. Do not hide the incident or destroy evidence.

4. STRICT RULE — CLIENT POACHING, DIVERSION & PRIVATE DEALING

Appzeto's clients and business opportunities are built through the company's investment, team effort and service. Deliberately taking an Appzeto client or company opportunity for personal benefit or diverting it to another person/business is a serious breach of trust.

- Do not approach, persuade, pressure or induce an Appzeto client or active company lead to leave Appzeto, cancel/avoid an Appzeto project, or move the work to you, your own business, another agency, a competitor, a friend or any third party.
- Do not accept or arrange private/off-book work or direct payment from an Appzeto client for services connected to an Appzeto opportunity, unless authorised in advance in writing by Management.
- Do not use a client relationship, confidential contact details, project knowledge, quotation, requirement or company lead obtained through your job to create personal business or benefit another provider.
- Do not hide, redirect, delay, misrepresent or privately retain a company enquiry or lead. Do not share client contacts, requirements, proposals or follow-up details with unauthorised people.
- If a client contacts you privately about additional work, payment, a new project or moving the work outside Appzeto, do not negotiate or accept it privately. Inform your Team Lead/Management and record the matter through the approved company channel.
- These restrictions target deliberate solicitation, diversion, unauthorised private dealing and misuse of confidential information. They do not prohibit ordinary professional courtesy or lawful activity unrelated to misuse of Appzeto information.
- Any allegation will be reviewed on evidence, context and the employee's explanation. Disciplinary or legal action will be taken only as justified by the facts, valid agreements and applicable law.

5. Sales team — lead ownership & handling

Appzeto-generated or assigned leads are company business opportunities. Until Appzeto authorises otherwise, employees must handle them transparently and only for company work.

- Keep lead details, client requirements, follow-up status and next steps accurate in the company-approved record or channel designated by the Team Lead. This policy does not require use of a CRM.
- Do not transfer leads to personal accounts, hide a lead, intentionally leave it unreported, divert it, sell it or share it with outsiders.
- Use approved communication channels and follow the authorised lead-allocation process. If a lead is duplicate, unreachable, incorrect or unsuitable, report/update it honestly rather than retaining it privately.
- Do not promise unauthorised discounts, delivery dates, refunds, features or contract terms. Escalate complaints, suspicious payment requests or suspected lead diversion promptly.

6. Developers & technical team — code and project integrity

- Create, update and store Appzeto/client code only in approved repositories and environments. Do not move code to personal repositories or unapproved storage.
- Do not copy, sell, publish, transfer, reuse or disclose Appzeto/client code, designs, databases, credentials or project assets without written authorisation.
- Never add backdoors, hidden access, malicious code or unapproved tracking; do not disable security controls or use another person's credentials.
- Keep project work documented so the authorised team can continue it: current status, pending tasks, dependencies, known issues, setup/deployment notes and relevant decisions.
- Do not withhold code, credentials, documentation or project access due to a disagreement, resignation or HR/payment issue. Raise the concern with HR/Management while protecting project continuity.

7. STRICT RULE — FREELANCING, SIDE PROJECTS & SECOND JOBS

Employees must not use Appzeto's working time, resources, confidential information or client relationships to run unauthorised outside work. The key requirement is transparency and avoiding conflicts with Appzeto responsibilities.

- Before accepting paid freelancing, consulting, a second job or commercial side work that overlaps with Appzeto's services, clients, working hours or assigned duties, disclose it in writing to HR/Management and obtain written approval where required by your employment agreement or company procedure.
- Do not perform freelance/private work for an Appzeto client or lead, or take an opportunity that came through Appzeto, without prior written Management approval.
- Do not use Appzeto laptops/accounts, personal work devices configured for Appzeto, software licences, code, templates, leads, client data, office time or other company resources for outside business without written authorisation.
- Do not allow outside work to affect attendance, availability, delivery commitments, quality, confidentiality or responsibilities at Appzeto.
- Competing work, unauthorised client work, misuse of company resources or a conflict of interest is prohibited. Personal learning and non-commercial activities are not automatically prohibited if they do not create a conflict or interfere with work.
- If you are unsure whether an activity is a conflict, disclose it before starting. Approval or rejection should be confirmed in writing.

8. Professional conduct & company resources

- Treat colleagues, clients, vendors and partners respectfully. Harassment, discrimination, threats, fraud, deliberate dishonesty, retaliation for good-faith reporting and intentional disruption are unacceptable.
- Follow lawful and reasonable instructions related to your role, project delivery, client service and information security. Raise concerns respectfully with your manager or HR.
- Use company accounts, software, funds, facilities and access only for authorised purposes. Do not lend your login or access to another person.
- Report loss, damage, suspicious activity or unauthorised access involving company property or information promptly.

9. Resignation, notice period & project handover

Resignation does not remove an employee's responsibility to follow the notice period and exit process in their employment agreement and applicable company procedures.

- Do not abandon assigned work, stop attending without following the required communication process, or deliberately disrupt a project. If an emergency or lawful reason affects attendance, inform HR/Management as soon as reasonably possible.
- During the applicable notice period, cooperate with a reasonable handover: document current status, pending tasks, dependencies, known issues and important decisions; update project records/code; and transfer company property and authorised access to the designated person.
- Do not delete, lock, damage, withhold or privately retain project files, source code, client records, credentials or documentation.
- Early release, notice waiver or an agreed extension must be confirmed in writing by authorised Management. This policy does not require anyone to remain employed indefinitely until every project is completed.

10. Exit, return of property & continuing confidentiality

- On or before the last working day—or earlier if lawfully requested—return company property, ID/access cards, documents and storage media, and transfer company work and authorised access to the designated person.
- Remove company confidential information from personal devices/accounts where applicable and lawfully required. Do not retain copies, screenshots, exports, credentials, backups or client/project files. Confirm completion when requested.
- Do not delete or alter company records to conceal activity. After leaving Appzeto, do not disclose or misuse confidential information, protected client/lead data, source code or intellectual property.
- Continuing confidentiality and IP duties apply to the extent provided by applicable law and valid agreements. Do not represent yourself as an authorised Appzeto representative after employment ends without written permission.

11. Reporting, investigation & disciplinary action

Report suspected violations promptly to HR, Management or the designated security contact. Good-faith reports will be handled discreetly as far as practicable. Retaliation for good-faith reporting is unacceptable.

- Appzeto may review relevant company systems, work records, access logs and business communications for legitimate security, operational or investigative purposes, subject to applicable law and company procedures.
- Each concern will be assessed using available evidence, seriousness, business/client impact, context and the employee's explanation. Where appropriate, the employee will have an opportunity to respond.
- Depending on the facts and applicable law, action may include counselling, written warning, access restriction, reassignment, disciplinary action up to and including termination, or recovery of proven losses through lawful means.
- Where supported by evidence and applicable law, Appzeto may pursue appropriate civil or criminal remedies. This policy does not create automatic fines, arbitrary salary deductions, guaranteed prosecution or industry-wide blacklisting.
- Urgent access restrictions may be applied when reasonably necessary to protect people, systems, clients or information while a matter is reviewed.

12. Policy administration

HR/Management will communicate approved updates and answer questions. This policy works alongside the employee's employment agreement and lawful company procedures; it does not remove statutory rights. Management should confirm the effective date and review any contractual restrictions against applicable law before enforcement.

EMPLOYEE ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

I confirm that I have received, read and understood this policy. I understand my responsibility to protect Appzeto's clients, leads, information, code and property; avoid unauthorised client dealing and conflicting outside work; and follow applicable company procedures and my employment agreement. I may raise questions with HR/Management.

DEVELOPER GROWTH & PROMOTION POLICY

Grow with Appzeto. Your effort, delivery and results create your growth path.

Policy owner HR / Management	Version 1.0	Effective date _____	Applies to Development Team
---------------------------------	----------------	-------------------------	--------------------------------

OUR GROWTH PROMISE

At Appzeto, we want our employees to grow as the company grows. Growth is earned through consistent effort, quality work, ownership and delivery—not simply by completing years of service. Every developer should know what is expected and how to build a path toward higher responsibility, salary growth, incentives and promotion.

1. The principle: performance over tenure

Appzeto does not promote employees only because they have completed 6 months, 1 year or any other period. Length of service alone does not guarantee a promotion or increment.

- Promotion and growth decisions are based on measurable contribution: completed work, quality, reliability, ownership, improvement and readiness for the next level.
- An employee who delivers stronger results may progress sooner than a longer-serving employee. A newer employee may earn higher pay than a senior employee when their verified contribution and role justify it.
- There is no need to wait for an annual cycle to recognise sustained performance. Reviews may happen every 3 months, and earlier consideration is possible when results and role readiness support it.

2. Monthly delivery standard — minimum 4 projects

Every developer is expected to deliver a minimum of 4 assigned projects per month, in line with the company's project allocation and delivery process.

- The monthly target is 4 completed and accepted projects. Starting a project, partially completing it, or handing over unfinished work does not count as a completed project.
- If a developer delivers fewer than 4 projects in a month, the shortfall must be recovered in the following month, in addition to meeting that following month's target of 4 projects.
- If the developer fails to meet the 4-project monthly target for 2 consecutive months, the matter will move to formal review in the 3rd month and may result in a warning or further action.
- Developers must raise project blockers, unclear requirements, dependency delays or workload concerns with their Team Lead as soon as they arise—not after the deadline. The Team Lead/Management will review documented blockers and project allocation; concerns must not be used to conceal avoidable delay.
- Project allocation and completion are tracked by the Team Lead/Management through the company's designated work records.

3. WANT FASTER GROWTH? DELIVER ABOVE THE MINIMUM.

Four accepted projects per month is the required baseline. Developers who consistently deliver more than 4 accepted projects, while maintaining quality and professional standards, can earn additional performance points. These points contribute to promotion and incentive consideration.

4. How the performance points work

Points are earned for verified delivery above the monthly minimum. The point system is intended to recognise both output and dependable execution—not rushed or low-quality work.

- Each accepted project delivered above the monthly minimum may earn additional points under the scoring method communicated by Management.
- Points are recorded only after the assigned work is completed, reviewed and accepted by the authorised Team Lead/Project Manager. Duplicate, partial, reopened due to avoidable quality issues, or unapproved work does not automatically earn a point.
- Quality, complexity, timely delivery, documentation, teamwork, ownership and avoidable rework may be considered in validating the contribution and applicable points.
- Management will maintain/communicate the applicable point values and review records so employees can understand how their points are counted. Points cannot be self-assigned.

Simple example — how delivery affects growth

Developer	Monthly delivery record	How it is treated
Ram	Has worked at Appzeto for 2 years, but regularly delivers below expectations.	Time served alone does not guarantee promotion. He must meet the delivery standard and demonstrate improvement.
Shyam	Joined 6 months ago and consistently delivers 6 accepted projects per month with good quality.	His above-target delivery can earn points and bring earlier promotion/incentive consideration, subject to review and role readiness.

5. Promotion, salary growth & incentives

Verified performance points and sustained results are key inputs for promotion and incentive decisions.

- Performance and growth may be reviewed every 3 months. Appzeto may consider promotion, salary revision, incentives, expanded responsibilities or a development plan based on the employee's record and available role/business requirements.
- Consistent above-target delivery, quality, reliability, initiative, teamwork, communication and readiness for the next role may strengthen an employee's case for promotion.
- Promotion or incentive is not automatic merely because a point total or review date is reached. Management will confirm decisions in writing, including the effective date and applicable terms.
- There is no fixed seniority-based salary order. Compensation may differ based on role, skills, verified contribution, performance and business requirements.

6. Review, feedback & employee responsibility

The purpose of this policy is to make growth expectations visible and encourage employees to take ownership of their career progression.

- Team Leads should communicate assigned project expectations, review delivery records and provide clear feedback on strengths and improvement areas.
- Employees are responsible for tracking their assigned work, maintaining required documentation, raising blockers early and asking for feedback on their next growth level.
- If an employee disagrees with a delivery record or point calculation, they should raise it with the Team Lead/HR within a reasonable time and provide relevant work records for review.
- Employees should not compare promotion decisions only by joining date, title or salary. Each case is assessed on its own documented performance, role and readiness.

7. Missed targets & corrective action

The 4-project monthly baseline is a core delivery expectation. Repeatedly missing it without timely escalation and a valid, documented review may lead to corrective action.

- One missed month: the shortfall is carried forward and must be recovered in the next month, while still meeting that month's 4-project target.
- Two consecutive months below target: formal review is initiated in the 3rd month. Depending on the record, explanation, project allocation and applicable company process, action may include a written warning, performance improvement plan, closer review or further disciplinary action.
- Deliberate misreporting, hiding incomplete work, manipulating delivery records or refusing reasonable handover/cooperation may be treated as a separate conduct concern.
- Any action will be based on documented facts and the employee's explanation, and will follow applicable company procedures and law.

8. Policy administration

This policy applies to the Development Team and should be read with the employee's employment agreement and other lawful Appzeto procedures. Management will communicate the applicable point-scoring method and any approved updates. The policy does not remove statutory rights. Promotion, salary revision and incentives are confirmed only through written Management approval.

EMPLOYEE ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

I confirm that I have received and understood this Developer Growth & Promotion Policy. I understand the monthly delivery baseline, performance-point approach and that growth is based on effort, accepted delivery, quality and role readiness—not tenure alone.
